Connected Nottingham Zone welcomes visitors

Last week Nottingham hosted the latest Core Cities Summit. Around 450 delegates attended the Summit, from the eight Core Cities of Birmingham, Bristol, Leeds, Liverpool, Manchester, Newcastle, Nottingham and Sheffield, including chief executives, council leaders and young delegates.

Connected Nottingham played a key role at the Summit – sponsoring the Connected Nottingham Wireless Zone in the Playhouse. Over the two days, many delegates took time out of their summit schedule to come and use the facilities and catch up on their emails, file reports, download summit documentation or just catch up on the latest news via our plasma screen TV.

Summit Chair, broadcaster and journalist Jon Snow also visited the Zone.

The Clever City presents to Core Cities

On day two of the summit, Connected Nottingham and Greater Nottingham Partnership jointly hosted a fringe event on the Clever City concept.

Around 150 delegates heard from Andy McLeod from Cisco on technology and workplace transformation and also Martin Gawith from the Greater Nottingham Partnership, who gave an overview of local activity.

The audience was then invited to ask the assembled panel questions on how technology is reshaping work, travel, the environment we live in and partnerships.
